

Parish Priest's Advice Led to Her Recovery

This week or two people—those who "take cold easily"—should be prepared with Eckman's Alternative in the house. Remarkable cures of even Tuberculosis (Consumption) persons are often accomplished. For Bronchitis, Asthma and Hay Fever no more effective remedy exists. I was troubled with Asthma and Bronchitis for several years. After trying many remedies, Eckman's Alternative was recommended to me by our Parish Priest. I can now feel fine. I cannot speak too highly of it.

(Signed) Mrs. Anna M. McPhee.

Eckman's Alternative is good for all throat and lung troubles, and is on sale in Barre by Burt H. Wells and other druggists. It can also be obtained at, or procured by, your local druggists. Ask for booklet of cured cases, or write for evidence to the Eckman Laboratory, Phila., Pa.

Street Fight Last Night Participated in by Many Men.

A strenuous street fight in front of the Boston Fruit company's store on Main street, shortly after eight o'clock last night, almost developed into a race war, in which English-speaking men, Italians and Spaniards were mixed up. The trouble started over the purchase of some liquor by English-speaking young men at an Italian's house on Barre street, the purchasers claiming that they were not treated decently, and the Italians in the crowd thought they had been insulted; so the fight started. It was small at the start but soon developed into a free-for-all, with about twenty excited men participating. Several were knocked down and others were battered; but Policeman McAvoy appeared on the scene just then, having been hastily summoned and the fighters faded away down the railroad tracks.

The congregation quite generally expressed their regrets at his coming departure from the church."

Rev. S. F. Blomfield referred briefly to the Vatican-Roosevelt incident yesterday morning, saying that he thought Col. Roosevelt did right in refusing to visit the pope under the conditions imposed, and he was not sure that the attitude taken by the Roman Catholic church was wise to that part of the church, which Rome represents. He said there were many Catholic hearts more grieved over the incident than the Protestants. In closing, he asked no member of his church to say harsh things about the affair.

VETERAN BUSINESS MAN.

Walter C. Landon Died in Rutland Yesterday Afternoon.

Rutland, April 11.—Walter C. Landon, the oldest business man in this city, died yesterday afternoon at his home. He was a native of Sunderland, the son of Nosh Landon, and was in his 70th year. He left home when 14 years old and was a clerk at Bennington store four years. Coming to Rutland in 1872, he worked for his cousin, a member of the firm of Landon & Graves. In 1887 he became the partner of Chester Kinsley in starting a grocery store. Selling out to Mr. Kinsley later, he bought the old Central hotel, in partnership with J. W. Granton, and conducted it for several years. Mr. Landon then sold his interest in the hotel to Mr. Granton, and operated a grocery store with J. N. Baxter. In 1884 he took over the business and ran it alone.

In 1888 he started the present hardware, automobile and vehicle business with C. F. Hantson as junior partner and built up one of the largest concerns of its kind in the state.

Mr. Landon in 1894-1895 was town village and school treasurer, and was later in 1894, 1895-1896. He was a water commissioner nine years, a selectman, twenty years a member of the fire department, ten years as chief engineer. In 1892 he represented the town of Rutland in the legislature, and was once a director of the True Blue Marble company, and had been a director of the Baxter National bank from its inception. At the time of his death he was its vice-president, for years he was treasurer of the Evergreen Cemetery association. He was one of the first to enlist in the Rutland Light Guards for the Civil war and was sergeant and color bearer in Company A, first Vermont regiment, fighting in the battle of Big Bethel. He re-enlisted in 1865, leaving Rutland as captain of Company K, twelfth Vermont. He served nine months and time under Gen. Stannard, of the Vermont brigade, who was in charge of the baggage train at Gettysburg.

Mr. Landon was commander of Robert's post, G. A. R., at the time of his death. He also was a member of the Knights of Pythias, Elks and Loyal Legion. He leaves a son, Charles H. Landon, of Rutland; a brother, Warren E. Landon, of Connecticut, and a sister, Mrs. Fannie P. Nichols of this city.

The funeral will be held Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock in Trinity Episcopal church.

HENRY J. NELSON DEAD.

One of Oldest Business Men in Burlington.

Burlington, April 11.—Henry J. Nelson, one of Burlington's oldest and most respected business men, died at 10:45 o'clock last evening at his home on Pearl street, after an illness of two weeks. Mr. Nelson was born on April 28, 1841, and therefore would have been 69 years old the 27th day of this month. All of his life he lived within 20 rods of his birthplace and his business was conducted not 40 rods away from it. He married April 19, 1872, Miss Adela Augusta Fitch of Worcester, Mass., who survives him. There were four children, Charles Henry and Louis Bailey, who were born in Bethel, Me., and the wife of Prof. E. C. Jacobs of this city, and Florence, the wife of Dr. P. O. Ray of Pennsylvania state college. Mrs. G. A. Kinsley of this city is a sister. Yesterday was the 35th anniversary of his marriage. Mr. Nelson was a Mason and a member of the Unitarian church.

In 1867 when he graduated from the high school, Mr. Nelson went into business in the then recently built building, which he has since occupied. In all that time the firm name has not been changed nor has there been even a temporary suspension of the business.

Mr. Nelson said a few weeks ago that there was not a single professional man left of those who were here when he went into business, neither lawyer, doctor nor minister. All of the school and college buildings and all but three of the churches had either been built new or remodelled since that time.

At Close Quarters with a Lion by Daylight.

Unless cornered, a lion will seldom attack a man in the daytime. If he does so, it is only under the most favorable conditions for a walk—such conditions as were furnished in my own personal experience. It happened during the morning hours, when I was alone in a "blind," loosely constructed of twigs and leaves, a corner passed by herds of hart-beest, impala, zebra and the like. The hours had gone slowly, and very little had fallen to the photographic bag. To kill time, I wrote a few letters, and, seeing me move, the pair stopped. Thinking it a good chance to secure a photograph, I leaned forward to pick up the camera, and at that the two came on again. Things seemed to grow interesting. In fact, I lost the moment's thought for photography and caught up the rifle. Wasting no time, I fired, and again the lions halted.

My shot had missed, the bullet going above their heads. Steadying myself, I fired again, with exactly the same result. Something was wrong with the gun; I saw that as soon as I examined it, for the gun had been there up to 300 yards. But worse than this, I suddenly remembered I had no ammunition except the three or four shots remaining in the magazine. Three or, possibly, four shots, you understand, to manage a pair of lions still perfectly good and intact. Therefore, I took extreme care with the first shot, bowled over my first friend with that, and with the fourth shot knocked the danger out of the other beast.

But the first one still showed fight. He scrambled to his feet, stood hesitating for a while, and appeared to be getting ready to have another try at me. Naturally, I was on my feet and ready to fire. Then, to my infinite relief, the wounded creature turned and went slowly into the bush.—A. R. Dugmore in the April Everybody's.

The Cooks who have used the Single Damper of the Crawford Ranges

Crawford Ranges

will never go back to the troublesome two-damper range

The cost of the food spoiled by mistakes in regulating the ordinary two-damper ranges amounts to a large sum.

The Single Damper of the Crawford affords absolute fire and oven control by one motion—slide the knob to "kindle," "bake" or "check," the range does the rest.

The Oven of the Crawford has cup-joint heat flues which heat everywhere alike and make it the quickest and surest of bakers.

The Two Hods (patented) in the base—one for ashes instead of the old clumsy ash pan—one for coal, is a great trouble-saving feature.

Gas Ovens and Broilers above or at end of range, if desired.

Vermont Furnished First Traitor.

The death of Roswell Buell, near-centuryman, removes one of Vermont's authorities on state and national history and a man whose researches explored the myth to the effect that Benedict Arnold was America's first traitor. According to Buell, Vermont furnished the first traitor, a Clarendon man. Truths, long hidden, always come to light in time, unweakened or otherwise. Vermonters will take no pride in this historian's discovery, but it is an important one and should go on record.—Rutland Herald.

Historic Houses in Vermont.

The Messenger has a very pronounced sentimental interest in the preservation of historic relics and landmarks, but it must confess that it is inclined to share with the Rutland News that the talk about the purchase and preservation of the so-called "state house" in Rutland is something of a great deal about a very little matter. As a matter of fact, the Rutland state house was not a state house in the modern understanding of the term, but was the mere temporary meeting-place of the legislature on several occasions in the early days, when there was no state capital, and occupies practically no place in the memories of Vermonters as being identified with any special affairs of moment. There are doubtless many other buildings that have equal claim to being "historic."—St. Albans Messenger.

Mead Loses the Reformer.

There is certainly no good reason for the waning answer, the eminent Dr. Mead of Rutland made to M. J. Haggood's proposition that all candidates for the gubernatorial nomination file a sworn statement of their campaign expenses after the state convention. And the most serious feature of this action is the doctor's apparent willingness to stand the consequences. When a candidate for the governorship refuses by evasion or otherwise to make such a statement it shows either that he has already spent more money than he thinks the people would consider legitimate or that he is so sure of the nomination that he feels safe in telling the people it's none of their business how much it cost. Heretofore the Reformer has not opposed Dr. Mead's candidacy, but it will go on record now as being unwilling to support any gubernatorial candidate who is not willing to come out squarely in a matter of such importance as this.—Brattleboro Reformer.

The "Why" of It.

Here it is again, the same old habit of generations, the same old curiously illogical occupation that possesses official minds so frequently and persuades otherwise sensible men that it is not always well for the people to know their own business. A news report from Windham county telling about how two men broke out of the county jail at Newfane last Friday, contains the significant sentence: "The police and the authorities have been trying to keep the attempted escape secret." Why?—St. Albans Messenger.

The point of the foregoing editorial paragraph is much nearer the truth than the report on which it is based. It is true that two men made an attempt to break out of the county jail, but were unsuccessful. It is not true that "the police and the authorities" tried to keep the matter secret to the extent that they were in the slightest degree unwilling to tell the circumstances when requested to do so, although as long as the prisoners were held in their cells, there was no occasion for running to the newspapers.—Brattleboro Reformer.

Spare the Shade Trees.

One of the many excellent suggestions made by State Highway Commissioner C. W. Gates, at the county road meeting held in this city Wednesday, was his advice to the town officials to spare the trees, however small, that will be useful later for shade. Between the two extremes of allowing bushes to grow up to the wheel tracks and cutting down everything in the shape of a bush between the road fences there should be a reasonable, common sense mean which will spare saplings that will grow into shade trees.

Occasionally one finds a country road which is beautifully shaded, and such a stretch of highway affords a grateful relief from the summer sun and is chosen as a favorite drive for pleasure seekers. A little thought, a little love for the beautiful and the artistic, may add very greatly to the adornment and the comfort of our highways.

A road is something more than a strip of land three rods wide over which one must travel to reach a given destination. This may be the chief purpose, but there are certain by-products (if a scientific term is permissible in such a connection of enjoyment to be gathered as the traveler pursues his journey. Shade trees along the road not only minister to the comfort of the person who passes along the highway, but gratify his love of the beautiful. If a policy of sparing and pruning the shade trees along our Vermont roads, like that advocated by Mr. Gates, had been followed for the past twenty-five or thirty years, our highway might be pretty generally shaded by this time, and the tendency would be to set out trees where nature planted none. A little thought, a little consideration for the future, an imagination that sees in a tiny sapling a future tree, beautiful to look upon and affording shade from the summer heat—how much they mean for the future. Spare the trees Mr. Road Commissioner and present and future generations will rise up to call you blessed. You will establish for yourself a very substantial monument and you will add materially to the comfort of travel and to the beauty of a beautiful state.—Montpelier Journal.
